DEMOCRATIC LANDSLIDE.

30,000 MAJORITY

For Democratic State Ticket in Kentucky.

New York Goes Democratic By 70,000 Majority and Mary-land Follows Suit.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 5.—With only 123 precincts unreported, the returns from the Kentucky election give Gov. Beckham a net plurality of 29,373. The total number of precincts in the state is 1,995. Embraced in the 134 unreported are the counties of Martin, Leslie and Knott. The remaining precincts are scattered as follows: Six in the First congressional district, two in the Second, nineteen in the Third, six in the Fourth, two in the Fifth, five in the Seventh, two in the Eighth, five in the Ninth, and thirty-seven in the Tenth and thirty-five in the Eleventh.

Two of the unreported counties, Leslie and Martin, are Republican, while Knott is Democratic. Leslie gave a majority of 1,082 for Yerkes in 1900. Martin gave Yerkes 566 in the same year, while Knott gave Beckham 541 over Yerkes.

The returns from the Eleventh district are not reducing Gov. Beckham's plurality so much as was expected by the Republicans, and it now seems highly probable that the final count will leave his plurality somewhere from 28,000 to 30,000.

A MOUNTAIN CORRESPONDENCE.

BY S. BRET ROMAN.

My dear Val—Allen—I sincerely wish you were Valerie's mother instead of her guardian. I really don't see what use there is of a guardian if he does us. You do lives shut up in his country house, while all sorts of things are happening and undesirable men are trying to marry Valerie—I know this is all jumbled up, but, really, I am so provoked with the child I don't know what I am writing. What she means by her senseless and erratic way of going on, turning off all the nice men and good parties whom the other girls are running after, and then encouraging such impudences follows as Richard Fenton, going walking with him and giving him most of her dances at every cation and laughing at every hint or suggestion I make and not following my advice at all, is more than I can follow.

Everybody is beginning to talk about the roses he sends her—I'd like to know where he gets the means to order American beauties in New York and his outrageously pointed attentions. I am exasperated to the last degree, and can do absolutely nothing with the troublesome child. I told her plainly the other day that with her looks and education and wealth she certainly ought to marry brilliantly, and then I discovered emphatically that she had no intention of doing so.

She laughed and whistled to herself and went out of the house. I said I would write to you about her silly and "contrary" conduct, and reminded her of her father's will, and that she must do as he says about marriage until she is 25. She blazed out to say she would not be dictated to by you or anybody on such matters, and that that book Fenton was worth much more than a million dollars. If she were not my child I would wash my hands of her.

Now, I really think you ought to come and look after Valerie—as her guardian.

She was always the queerest and most unmanageable child, and so unlike other girls.

She takes interest in all sorts of queer people and things, and none at all in her governess. When we were in Paris I entreated her to come with me to consult Donnet and order some costumes for winter. She said that was none of her business, but Donnet's that she was no dressmaker. Just fancy, I learned the other day by accident that she was helping some impoverished Italian woman who claims, I suppose, to be a countess—to raise silk worms.

I nearly fainted when I heard of it. We will have caterpillars throughout the house next.

You really must do something, my dear Allen. You'd better come.

Yours with a nervous headache,
SUSAN FARNLEIGH.

The Cottage on the Cliffs.
My dear Val—Aren't you rather tired of your unvarying pleasures? To-day Jones Pordix gets to be rather sickening, and a little change and variety is a wonderful tonic to brace up one's jaded appreciation of pleasures which become monotonous by constant repetition.

I hear you are growing pale, and your roses are fading, so I thought of you yesterday while watching a clear-skinned mountain girl trudging by with a pail of milk and the idea occurred to me that if you would run up here to these solitudes for a few weeks—or months, my dear—the pig-mint contrast of this life with your ceaseless turmoil and rush would amuse you.

There you would have nothing on earth to do but drive or stroll through the mountains and chat with your old guardian in the evenings, until you get sleepy and go to bed.

An artist of some value comes here every summer to sketch and paint, and you must give him a few sittings, so that when you leave the hermit of those wilds and go back to your youthful and legitimate frivolities, your image will remain behind on the walls of his library, to keep him company during the long winter evenings.

What inducements can I offer you? The open patches on the slopes of the mountains are white with daisies. Glen Birnie falls tumble and roar a half mile away, an old German cabinet maker from Cologne, skilled in his craft, makes charming pieces of furniture—furniture of oak and maple and turned maple wood.

Squirrels abound, and brown mountain rabbits run across the road, and this old castle is big and comfortable, and Mrs. Harris, my housekeeper, will look after you with delight.

I had almost forgotten a small lake where you can catch mountain perch, and row in a small boat. If the artist will let you, for the lake and the boat are his.

There is a small picturesque church in a hollow, and its slender spire stretches upwards, and, catching the rays of the setting sun, preaches its own lesson, and the sound of its little bell is distinctly heard from the terrace of my castle, a pretty terrace, Val, where you and I will sit and take our coffee after dinner, following the mode of Europe, while listening to the tinkling of the cowbells as "the herd winds slowly over the lea."

Will you come, Val? Yours faithfully, child,

ALLEN DUNCAN.

Of course I will, and with joy unsuspected, I cousin Allen, joyful to escape persecution, staid and unapproachable gossip, mamma's reproaches and a fat man and his glances. You may expect your countessward any day.

I can't possibly say why because our engagement list is crowded and then matter will never let me off from attending at least one-half of these fearful functions, which have become the scene of an exciting game of hide and seek, carried on by a pursuer and a pursued. The fat man, who possesses a few railroads, some towns and villages, and half the Pacific coast—mamma says, and the writer of this note, I hope you will be able to read it.

If it were not for the kindly help of a nice boy, Dick Fenton, who warns me of my enemy's approach and helps me to elude him, and usually hands him at the table with mamma and a champagne bottle, I would have fallen into his clutches de guerre lasse, and the poor victim, Valerie Farnleigh, would have died a hideous death, in white satin and Venetian point, to the sound of Mendelssohn's march.

After this explanation you can realize the utter delight with which I flee away to you and your castle on the heights, and not a soul shall know where I have gone. I am positively beginning to loathe my "monotonous pleasures," as you cleverly call our functions and gatherings, polo excepted, and really, my dearest cousin, if your invitation had not come just when it did I would have accepted an auto ride with my persecutor, the fat man, as a possible alternative ending in stead of the other man.

The delight of tramping through fields of daisies, milking cows—did you not include milking in the list of rural diversions you offer—and listening to Glen Birnie falls, and your sweet church bells—

I think I will give mamma the slip, let her do the treadmill round of dinners and other wearisome things, and will take the train without even Annette, and will run up to you to-morrow.

Have you any pretty, rosy-faced children in your mountains? Who is your artist? I know only one. He is—well, he is a very remarkable man, and I will tell you about him when we are sitting on your terrace sipping coffee.

He, too, loves the mountains—I believe better than anything except his art. He has just left town. He wants to finish some wonderful picture.

He will have a great reputation some day, my artist. He has real genius.

Of course I will sit to have my portrait painted if you want me on your library walls, although if you will only invite me I will take up my permanent abode in your castle and gladly forget the world, its pomps and vanities, the fat owner of railroads and an auto, and my artist friend, who is such a dear, jolly fellow, only much too talented.

When did you say you would expect me? Wednesday? Why not to-morrow night?

With delightful anticipations of freedom, cows and daisies and long, confidential chats.

VALERIE.

The Castle on the Cliffs.

My dear Sir—If not too absorbed in your present work I would esteem it a great favor if you will consent to paint a life-size portrait of my ward, who will be my guest in the mountains for a few weeks shortly.

She will give you sittings in any room you may select, and your terms will be entirely satisfactory to me.

I have seen and very much admire some of your work. Allow me to suggest day after tomorrow at one o'clock in the afternoon for the first sitting.

I will add that the young lady has considerable beauty, a consideration which usually must have weight with a talented artist. With regards, yours very truly,

ALLEN DUNCAN.

The Castle on the Cliffs.

My dear Susan—Val arrived safely last evening, and I trust I can safely promise to send her back to you in good health and spirits.

If you will only stop trying to drive the child, and will realize that you can't possibly thrust a round ball into a square hole, that Valerie is a most remarkable young woman, high-spirited, independent and beautiful, and utterly unamenable to sordid reasons which would readily influence a less noble and high-strung nature, you will spare yourself endless trouble and the child much mortification and unhappiness.

Let her alone my earnest advice to you. Of one thing you may be sure, wisely or unwisely—but I think wisely, for Val has been an intellect as she has a tender and true heart—she will make her own selection and shape her own future, and any urging on your part or interference will be time wasted, my dear friend.

She has not mentioned the Impenions fellow, Richard Fenton, you wrote me, but alludes frequently to an artist friend whom she says is going. To my mind there is more danger in that direction. I will get her to tell me about him.

I am about to have a portrait painted of Val by an artist of remarkable talent who comes up here in the summer time.

Again I repeat and urge, let her alone.

Believe me, my dear Susan, cordially yours,

ALLEN DUNCAN.

They sat on the terrace together and Val had just declared her unalterable conviction on a certain question.

"I agree with you, my dear," Allen said, smiling gravely. "Only, little girl, the choice must be wise. A life's happiness is a grave consideration. Everything pales into insignificance beside it. But it must be a certainty of happiness. Tell me about your artist. This wonderful genius, the thought of whom gives so soft a light to your eyes and makes the color flicker in your cheeks. Who is he?"

The shadows were lengthening on the terrace, and the great mountain ranges melted off in long undulations in the distance. The scene was fair and beautiful, and daisies covered the smilt fields.

Valerie turned slowly and looked full at Allen from eyes of wonderful depth and beauty. "The worst choice must be wise," she said, and the butler ushered a visitor where they sat.

Valerie sprang up with a slight cry and extended both hands. Then turning, she led Dick forward.

"Here it is, cousin—my happiness," she said, smiling radiantly.

The Castle on the Cliffs.

My dear Susan—Richard Fenton is a fine fellow and an artist of genius. He will be a celebrity. Val is engaged to him with my approval.

Don't distress yourself. If happiness is to be found on earth they will have it.

Write and congratulate the child. Yours cordially,

ALLEN DUNCAN.

FREE RECLINING CHAIR CARS.

"The Henderson Route"—Always First.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 29, 1903.—The traveling public will be pleased to learn of the latest innovation in the way of comfort in travel for its patrons which is now being offered by the public by the Henderson Route. The "Henderson Route," which road has been rightly termed the "Traveler's Official Route."

It has just been announced from the general office of the Louisville, Henderson & St. Louis railway that they now have in service on their night trains between Louisville and St. Louis, Free reclining Chair Cars, which have just been received from the shops and are a revelation in the car-builder's art.

The cars are strictly up to date, first-class "palaces of travel" on wheels, and which are promised the public by the Henderson Route.

Among other advantages offered in these highly finished cars, a few of the most important points only mentioned.

They are solidly restful and are furnished with sixty-four reclining chairs, which are upholstered in beautiful green plush, in addition to smoking and toilet rooms being furnished throughout in leather. They are also fitted up with triple trucks, which feature will do away with the jerk, jar and strain incident to travel in the ordinary railway coach, and insure a smooth, comfortable ride. This should prove more than a popular feature in traveling service to the traveling public, and we can suggest that in traveling you "get the Henderson Route" habit.

PONDS AND SWAMPS

They Offer Great Possibilities for the Nature Student.

Places of Wonderful Activity That May Be Studied with Interest—Some Things One May Find in Them.

A pond, particularly if a portion of or the margin is swampy, has great possibilities for the nature student. There seems to be no limit to the variety of living creatures which may be found there in the course of a year. In this respect a pond is superior even to a brook.

I live near such a pond and I visit it often. It has its counterpart in any one of ten thousand little ponds throughout the country, yet the United States government does not employ a number of clerks sufficient to record the business which is transacted with in sight of its banks. No matter how hot or how cold the weather, no matter how dull things are in the country round about—here there is always something interesting to be seen or heard. Here I come in the early spring, to see the first, and seemingly the brightest, of the marsh marigolds, reflected in the cold clear water, and to lift from the shallow masses of the transparent frog spawn, in which may be seen scores of tiny black specks, which will some day be frogs. Here, too, I come at night to hear the lonely bittern calling his mate, in a voice which sounds like the water beating against the mouth of a cavern. And later in the year I find their nest in the marshy area, a handful of coarse grasses, with four or five big eggs.

And so all through the summer, when the turtles sit in rows on the half-rotten logs, and when the frogs squat on the lily pads, until the fall, when the muskrats build their winter houses on the mud flats, and when the black duck and the wild geese drop to spend a few days on their way to the south. Nor is business suspended in the winter, for then under the shivering ice along the bank, I mark the traces of the muskrat, and when I see between them the tiny footprints of mice, I know pretty well what he was looking for.

Amongst the other inhabitants of this pond are some huge snapping turtles, whose age is the subject of frequent discussions at the nearest country grocery. Some bear upon their shells certain dates and marks, which his claimers were carried more than 50 years ago. It is not often they are seen, but now and then one of the old fellows will raise his great snake-like head above the surface of the pond and blink a pair of the coldest, cruellest eyes which ever defigured the head of a reptile. Nothing in the pond is scared to these hardened old slimmers. No doubt they live largely on fish, but young muskrats and ducklings are often jerked below the surface of the pond to the no more, and wild mice, which sometimes swim across, are foolhardy to say the least.

Last June I was walking along the bank of a little stream which flows through a meadow and into a pond when my attention was attracted by the peculiar movement of a patch of waving grass. It was easy to see that the wind had little to do with it, so I ran over to investigate. In the middle of a good-sized depression caused by the flattening down of the grass, stood a giant snapping turtle, weighing 10 pounds if an ounce, I should say, and with great horny jaws apace, ready for business. I guessed that it was probably a female on her way to deposit her eggs in the sand somewhere, so I decided not to interrupt her. Instead, I retired to a distance, and climbed a tree, whence I had a good view of the meadow and the surrounding country. The old lady snapper continued on her way, lurching through the grass like a tramp steamer in a heavy sea, and stopping now and then to raise her head and look around. In the course of time she came out of the meadow and into an old road with a sandbank running along one side of it. This bank seemed to be her destination, for on one side of it she halted, and began scraping a hole with her big, beak-like front feet. She seemed to be in particular hurry, and as I was, I slipped down the tree and left her while she was on time. By and by I returned, and there she was raking the sand into the hole, and the task was nearly done. I waited until she had completed her work, and as soon as she waddled away, I began to do some digging myself. Under some 12 inches of sand I came upon the eggs, 12 of them, pure white and as round as marbles. In fact, they looked more like large white rafts than anything else I know of. I covered them up again, and, as I was not discovered by a snunk or some other animal which is fond of such dainties, they were probably hatched some time in the fall.

They Are of a Peculiar White, Long-Horned Breed.

Are Found in Many Parts of Eastern Europe. Where They Are Used for Draught Purpose of All Kinds.

The American traveler in south-eastern Europe can hardly be failed to notice the various breeds of white long-horned cattle which prevail there. The two best known breeds are the Italian and the Hungarian. It is probably safe to say that Hungarian cattle are an indigenous race, for the great source of supply for white cattle, even in Roman days, was the region that is represented to-day by Hungary as its center. This white breed has been said to be confined to Hungary, for it is to be found in Roumania, Transylvania, Moldavia, Bessarabia, Galicia, etc. The Podolian cattle are also white, and perhaps shorter in the legs and deeper in the body than the Hungarian cattle of the plains, while their horns are also shorter and much thicker.

Hungarian cattle do all the draught work that is to be done; plowing is done with oxen, wagons are drawn by them, and, in fact, teams of four oxen do all the farm and general draught work that we do with horses. On farms they begin to work these cattle when three or four years old, but the peasants use them even at an earlier age. The oxen are controlled by word of mouth. After being worked two or three years they are often fattened for the butcher. Excepting those at labor, Hungarian cattle are generally in a semi-wild state and live continuously out of doors. The pasture, or prairie ranges, carry enormous herds, their food being pasture only, except in winter time, when they get hay. The breeding animals, however, get some grain in addition. The cattle are looked after on the prairie by herdsmen, some of whom are, however, much after the manner of our cowboys of the western plains. These Hungarian herdsmen practically act as boundary riders. Hungary, as a rule, a land devoid of fences.

The calves are dropped under wild conditions, similar, at any rate, to those entered by our western range calves, and it may be said that they show many similar traits. The young calves are stained to be yellowish, while those near white have a brown stain down the neck and a faint one down the back.

When between two or three years old the young are brought off the prairie and broken to yoke. For use on these plains to withstand the heat of summer and rigors of winter, these cattle become hardy, and the food they have naturally be accustomed to makes them most economical in their keep. When not working they will, for example, do well on a diet of maize straw and chaff.

Cows of Hungarian breed, it must be noted are poor milkers, so much so that the milk supply of the country is to a large extent, obtained from animals of foreign dairy breeds, mostly Swiss or German. Hungarian cattle must therefore be regarded as draught oxen pure and simple, and though Hungary is a great horse breeding country, still oxen are bred alone for draught, and reared for that purpose, as being more economical in cost of food as compared with the horse, and having the advantage that they can be fattened after use. The East Indies and Africa are regions in which it is probable that Hungarian cattle could be well utilized. The points in favor of the breed are that they are reared under natural or semi-wild conditions, that their size, bulk and strength make them good draught animals, that they thrive well on very poor fare, and that they can resist disease better than any other breeds. On the state farm of domain of Mezőkovác a team of Hungarian oxen were found which stood over 17 hands high, each animal weighed over one ton, and each carried its horns over six feet from tip to tip, and this is often exceeded. Teams of oxen shod for road work measuring 16 hands in height are a frequent sight.

A SIMPLE QUESTION.

Hopkinsville People are Requested to Honestly Answer This.

Is not the word of a representative citizen of Hopkinsville more convincing than the doubtful utterances of people living everywhere else in the Union? Read this:

J. W. Tunks, of 302 West Seventh St., who is employed at M. C. Forbes Planing Mill says: "The condition of my health was such as to cause me a great deal of worry about my future. I had an almost constant aching across the small of my back and the kidney secretions were highly colored, excessive and irregular, in fact, the disorder was so pronounced that I had been said to be suffering from diabetes. I also suffered at the time with indigestion which caused me a great deal of distress. At one time I was scarcely able to do any work at all for nearly a year. I doctored and tried various remedies but nothing did me any permanent good until I used Doan's Kidney Pills, which I procured at Thomas & Trahern's drug store. I had taken them only a few days when I noticed a change for the better and by time I had finished the box I found that they had brought about so decided an improvement in my condition as to convince me of their real worth and I am more than thankful for the relief that I have received." The Best Remedy for Croup.

This is the season when the woman who knows the best remedies for croup is in demand in every neighborhood. One of the most terrible diseases of the world is to be awakened in the middle of the night by a whoop from one of the children. The croup remedies are almost sure to be lost, in case of croup, as a revolver is sure to be lost in case of burglars. There used to be an old fashioned remedy for croup, known as five-spice and tolu, but some modern mortals say that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is better, and does not cost so much. It can be kept in the patient's room as the phlegm "quicker, and gives relief in a shorter time. Give this remedy as soon as the croupy cough appears and it will prevent the attack. It never fails and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by Cook & Higgins, druggists.

It sounds like old times to read about that 63,000 majority in New York City.

Tom Johnson told Ohio and Gorman carried Maryland by 18,000 majority. Gorman's star is in the ascendant.

John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, was nominated by the Democrats for speaker, and there by made leader of his party in the House. Cannon, of Illinois will be elected speaker Monday.

Under the leadership of John Brasher in Hopkins county, the Democrats of that county have never known defeat. The future has something better in store for this gallant leader than the office of county clerk.

Judge J. P. Gordon won by a very handsome majority over Judge Pratt in the Hopkins county district, carrying his own county by 752 majority and the district by almost as much. John L. Gray was re-elected commonwealth's attorney.

In a drunken quarrel in Breathitt county Wednesday Zeke Spencer shot Curtis Gross dead. Gross, son, Sam Gross, in turn stabbed Spencer to death. Gross and Thomas Ham were arrested and are in jail at Jackson charged with murder.

Lucian Phelps, who redeems a Republican senatorial district in Louisville by a majority of 1,400, is a cousin of Maj. John Phelps, of this city. He is a talented young lawyer and will reflect credit upon himself and the state as a Senator.

The Owensboro guarantors of the State fair will resist the payment of the $12,000 deficit, about 75 per cent of the subscription, and the matter goes into the courts. In the meantime the newspapers of the State who hold advertising contracts, will have to whistle for their money.

The State of Panama has seceded from the Columbian republic and it is said at Washington the move has the support of the United States. It grows out of the rejection of the canal treaty by the Columbian Senate. If the new government has support from Washington, the revolution will succeed and the President will treat with Panama direct in the canal matter.

Results of the election Tuesday indicate that the political pendulum is again swinging towards the Democratic party. Enormous gains in New York and Massachusetts and signal victories in Maryland and Kentucky have brought encouragement to Democrats everywhere and inspire the hope that there is a good chance to succeed next year.

Judge B. W. Hubbard, of the Bowling Green district, is defeated on the face of the returns by 201 majority and Judge J. P. Tarvin, of the Covington district has met the same fate by 1,240 majority.

The loss of these Democratic districts is the only setback so far reported, while many Republican districts have been redeemed.

Negro With A Pistol Beat at His Own Game.

Hume Sharp Killed At Newstead by Ernest Watkins.

A negro named Hume Sharp was shot and killed at Newstead Tuesday about three o'clock by Ernest Watkins another negro. The killing was not over politics, but grew out of a row at the scene of a crap game about a quarter of a mile from the store at Newstead. Sharp was engaged in shooting his pistol off recklessly, when Watkins called to him to stop that shooting, or he would hit somebody. Sharp turned the weapon on Watkins replying "I will shoot you." He fired twice, one shot striking Watkins' hand. The latter then drew a pistol and returned the fire at close range. He shot three times and all took effect, two in the lower abdomen and one over the heart. Sharp was instantly killed.

Coroner Allenworth was telephoned for and went to Newstead and held an inquest. Watkins was held to be blameless in the matter although he came on to town and gave himself up. Watkins is a son of Nelson Watkins of Gracey and lives with Mr. Emmett Caudle. He is said to be a quiet, well disposed farm hand. He will probably have no difficulty in getting out on a plea of self defense.

On the Death of Leo XIII.

BY G. C. MERRICK.
"THE AWAKENING OF THE LION."
(De Konink.)
Not for lust of luxury and beauty,
Not for the sake of the conqueror's booty,
But for the still small voice of duty
Heavily did all temptations spurn
The illustrious lion of Lucerne.

The lion is dead.
With his awe-inspiring crest
In full-manned majesty and strength he has laid
His down to rest.
Of all earth's mortal monarchs the bravest,
Wise, best,
His bright eyes kindled with the love of Jesus and the cross.
Of immaculate Mary,
The blessed Virgin wife,
Who gave the world the life divine
To save mankind from loss.

Star of heaven's azure sea
When you endure never say
But with increasing luster shine,
Pulsing earth's richest mine,
The crown of thorns
From which poured healing streams from Love's
High mouth,
Thou glorious whose ever burning lamp
Illumes the chill nocturnal damp
O Earth's marian Pilgrim camp
Thou good Virgin, wife, with prayers and tears,
Did Leo humbly follow ninety years.
His virtues, Leo was unequalled
By long protracted agony
No once against Heaven's wise decree
In human insurance yielded:
His wasted frame by great soul tenanted
Stood ready to be whirled by Death's chill blast.

Like Autumn leaves, brown, golden, dappled red
Seethed sullen sky on turbid water cast.
We learn from them
The sure proof of immortality:
Twisted with pain,
Clear as thy brain,
The immortal soul
Spurred feeble matter's effort to control
The thoughts which wandered through eternity,
Scorned down the strong winds scorn the raging sea.
Yes, thy unfurled soul shone clear as ever
Thy victory through the shaft of fate could never:
No butterfly with painted wings,
No spangled bubble of the air,
Festally who died that sweet sings
Sethemane's nocturnal prayer:
"Father thy agonizing son
Thou shalt receive 'Thy will be done'!"
Pine was no pallid soul of Hadrian's woe,
In in God's love, pure, fervid, wise and strong
And round the world thy well-tuned harp sent Forth one grand sweet song.

He grand life work is o'er.
And nations now deplore
The lion of the Valican, the warrior of the cross,
From Italy's bay-indented shore
Do where Columbia's eagles soar,
Is heard the voice of a conflagration,
For the lion only shines,
The lion of the Valican,
Who never feared the face of man
The lion who was o'er
The mounting flames of glory burn:
Who died in duty's harness—the lion of Lucerne.

He sleeps, but not forsaken,
For the judgment trump shall blow,
Great doom of joy or woe,
The nations of the dead shall rise
And the lion of the Valican shall waken,
Once in earth's Gerthemane by all but God for salent
With gloried on his head and splendor in his eyes:
The kingdoms round the great white throne
Shall stand before him, the final sentence
Of all who seek or scorn repentance.
Long are the dreadful conflagration
Which shall consume each nation,
Along each height or hollow shore,
Loud shall reverberate the roar
Which made the iron Blumack bow
Before the Lion's calm, majestic brow:
Which bade the hostile cannon cease
And harness pale the paths of peace
And then the lion walked with God.

Be patient, then, O Zion!
And wait the waking of the Lion.
Be patient still, for soon
Thy God shall grant the boon
Of universal peace:
All strife shall cease
And War's red banner shall be furled
Throughout all the world.

Paul Kruger's diamond bribe was worth
The ransom of a hundred kings;
Yet diamonds and pearls and all
The riches of this world have wings:
The Lion held God's treasure fast—
Honor and truth and heaven at last.
Weep, land, O seven-shielded city,
With Universal pity
And weeping lip
For the stately ship
Launched out for the Unknown Shore.
For the kindly hand
Whose wise counsel
Thou shalt behold no more.
For the silver tongue,
Whose angel
The earth shall hear no more.

The famous diamond offered to Leo by President Kruger and rejected.

TEMPLE OF FASHION,

NINTH STREET. MISS S. B. HOOSER.

FOR THIRTY YEARS

Congressman Meekison Suffered From Catarrh—Read His Endorsement of Pe-ru-na.

CONGRESSMAN MEKISON, OF OHIO.

Hon. David Meekison is well known, not only in his own State but throughout America. He began his political career by serving four consecutive terms as Mayor of the town in which he lives, during which time he became widely known as the founder of the Meekison Bank of Napoleon, Ohio. He was elected to the Fifty-fifth Congress by a very large majority, and is the acknowledged leader of his party in his section of the State.

Only one flaw marred the otherwise complete success of this rising statesman. Catarrh with its insidious approach and tenacious grasp, was his only unaccounted for. For thirty years he waged unceasing warfare against this personal enemy. At last Peruna came to the rescue, and he dictated the following letter to Dr. Hartman as the result:

"I have used several bottles of Peruna and I feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head. I feel encouraged to believe that if I use it a short time longer I will be fully able to eradicate the disease of thirty years' standing."—David Meekison, ex-Member of Congress.

Over fifty members of Congress endorse Peruna as a catarrhal tonic. Men of prominence the world over praise Peruna.

A TONIC is a medicine that gives tone to some part of the system. There are different kinds of tonics, but the tonic most needed in this country, where catarrh is so prevalent, is a tonic that operates on the mucous membrane. Peruna is a tonic to the mucous membrane of the whole body. It gives tone to the capillary circulation which constitutes these delicate membranes.

Peruna is a specific in its operation upon the mucous membrane. It is a tonic that strikes at the root of all catarrhal affections. It gives tone to the minute blood vessels and the terminal nerve fibres. Catarrh cannot exist long where Peruna is used intelligently. Peruna reaches out catarrh in all the hidden parts of the body.

A. M. Ikard, an employee of the C. B. & Q. R. R., West Burlington, Ia., writes: "I had catarrh of the stomach and small intestines for a number of years. I went to a number of doctors and got no relief. Finally one of my doctors sent me to Chicago and I met the same doctor. They said they could do nothing for me, that I had cancer of the stomach and there was no cure. I almost thought the same, for my breath was something awful. I could hardly stand it. It was so offensive, I could not eat anything without great misery, and I gradually grew weaker."

"Finally I got one of your books, and concluded I would try Peruna, and thank God, I found a relief and a cure for that dreadful disease. I took five bottles of Peruna and two of Manlin, and I now feel like a new man. There is nothing better than Peruna, and I keep a bottle in my house all the time."—A. M. Ikard.

Catarrh of the stomach is usually called dyspepsia. Catarrhal dyspepsia cannot be cured by papain powder or any other temporary relief. The only cure for real dyspepsia is a removal of the catarrh from the mucous membrane of the stomach. This Peruna will do. This Peruna has done thousands and thousands of times.

Congressman Bokin, of Kansas, was cured of catarrh of the stomach of many years' standing. Hundreds of other cases have been reported to us through unsolicited testimonials. Peruna is the only internal systemic remedy for catarrh yet devised. Every one afflicted with catarrh in the slightest degree ought to take a course of Peruna.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address: Dr. Hartman, President of The Harman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

by 30,000. The contest was one of the bitterest in the history of the city, and so keenly interested was the public that more than $2,000,000 in wagers changed hands. The result puts a municipal budget of $195,000,000 under the control of Tammany.

Ohio.

Marcus A. Hanna swept the state, and the legislature, which will elect him, United States senator, has a Republican majority of 100 on joint ballot. Myron T. Herrick, Republican, is elected governor over Tom L. Johnson, Democrat, the vote being 500,000 to 385,000.

Iowa.

Albert B. Cummins, Rep., re-elected Governor over J. B. Sullivan, Dem., by 55,000 majority. The legislature is again overwhelming Republican, though returns indicate that the Democrats have won several members.

Nebraska.

Incomplete returns in Nebraska indicate the election of the Republican ticket by greatly decreased pluralities. John L. Sullivan, fusion candidate for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, is making unexpected gains, but it is not thought his lead is sufficient to elect him.

Maryland.

United States Senator Arthur Pue Gorman scores a great victory by the election of Edwin Warfield, Democrat, as Governor over S. A. Williams, Republican. The result emphasizes Senator Gorman's domination in the state and greatly strengthens his position as a candidate for the Presidency. The legislature, which is Democratic by a small plurality, will elect a Democratic successor to Senator McComas, Republican.

Rhode Island.

Lucius F. Garvin (Dem.) is re-elected governor over Samuel Pomeroy Colt, Rep., by 1,500 plurality, while the Republicans elect the remainder of the state officers and retain control of the legislature. By winning the legislature this year the Republicans hope to gain a firmer hold for next year, when Senator Aldrich comes up for reelection, and for this reason they fought a very energetic campaign.

Colorado.

Both parties claim to have carried Colorado, and all agree that the race between Judge Campbell, Rep., and Adair Wilson, Dem., for supreme court justice is very close. There was but one office to be filled by election, and as that is judicial, the result had little bearing on the politics of the state.

New York State.

The proposal to bond the state for $101,000,000, to convert the existing canals into barge canals is defeated, through the influence of the corporation interests. Dennis O'Brien, Dem., endorsed by Republicans, is elected judge of the court of appeals by 200,000. The assembly stands: Republicans, 85; Democrats, 65. Senate (no election year): Republicans, 28; Democrats, 22.

Massachusetts.

The Republicans carry the state, though by a reduced plurality. John L. Bates, Rep., is re-elected governor over William A. Gaston, Dem., by 35,849. The legislature is largely Republican.

New Jersey.

Republicans continue to control the legislature. Senator John Kean, Rep., whose term expires in 1905, will be re-elected.

Pennsylvania.

Pennsylvania stays Republican, returning the entire state ticket apparently by pluralities averaging about 100,000. The cities have also for the most part refused to turn Democratic.

LOCAL RESULTS

Republicans Carry the County by Usual Majority.

The table below shows the unofficial figures in the races for governor and circuit judge. The majority for Breathitt is 1225, and for Helknap 1054. Questioned ballots not counted in several precincts may change the official results some.

SEISMIC SHOCK.

Hopkinsville Houses Shaken By Severe Earthquake

No Damage Resulted, But Vibrations Were Felt as Far South As Mississippi.

A severe earthquake shock was felt in the city and at several points in the county shortly after one o'clock Wednesday afternoon. The vibrations lasted nearly a quarter of a minute, during which windows and glass and queensware rattled, electric light globes were put in motion like pendulums and some clocks were stopped. The direction of the earth's disturbance seemed to be from North to South. The shock was the most severe experienced in this section for many years. So far as heard from no serious damage was done.

Distinct at Owensboro.

Owensboro, Ky., Nov. 4.—A distinct earthquake shock was felt in this city and county at 1:29 o'clock this afternoon. Buildings vibrated and in some stores articles fell from the shelves. The guests at the Rudd House were at dinner in the fifth-story dining room and were considerably frightened.

No Alarm in Evansville.

Evansville, Ind., Nov. 4.—A slight earthquake shock was felt here shortly after 1 o'clock. It was not sufficient to cause any alarm.

Two in Memphis

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 4.—Two distinct earthquake shocks were felt here shortly after 12 o'clock today. No damage resulted in Memphis or vicinity, but occupants of the principal office buildings made hasty exits to the streets.

Mr. Duke's Dwelling and the Acme Mill's Damaged.

The dwelling of Mr. I. P. Duke, on O'Neal avenue, was struck by lightning Tuesday night and badly damaged. Members of the family who were in the house were considerably shocked. The bolt hit the chimney demolishing it, and one gable-end of the cottage was also torn out.

Late Monday afternoon the Acme Mills and Elevator Company's new building was hit by a bolt and several windows were broken. The damage was small. The corner of Forbes' planing mill was also hit and two men at work knocked down, but not injured.

A Sure Thing.

It is said that nothing is sure except death and taxes, but that is not altogether true. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption is a sure cure for all lung and throat troubles. Thousands can testify to that. Mrs. C. B. VanMetre, of Shepherdstown, W. Va., says: "I had a severe case of Bronchitis and for a year tried everything I heard of, but got no relief. One bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery then cured me absolutely." It's infallible for Croup, Whooping Cough, Grip, Pneumonia and Consumption. Try it. It's guaranteed by R. C. Hardwick, druggist. A Great Mistake.

I wish to say to the readers of the Kentuckian, that by some means or other a rumor has been circulated that many, if not really all the chrysanthemums grown for exhibition purposes have been destroyed. This rumor is wholly without foundation. I have made a careful investigation of nearly 1,500 plants and have not found a dozen plants injured by the frost. I found, too, that in my judgment, the collection as a whole is 100 per cent. better than last year. The show will occur Nov. 11, 12 and 13. The sale of tickets is already large, assuring success. Thursday, Nov. 12, will be Hopkinsville day. A 50 cent rate has been granted by the railroad from Hopkinsville. So come and enjoy a delightful day with the Fall Queen.

Respectfully,

Pembroke, Ky.

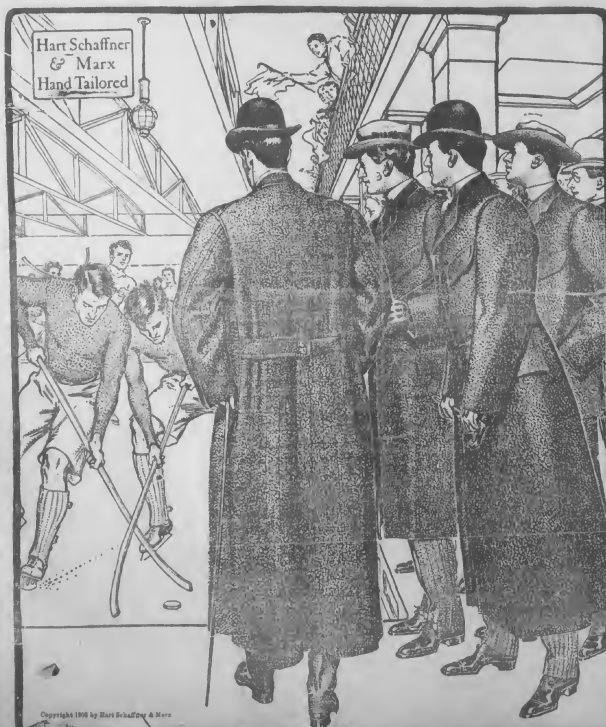

A Startling Test.

To save a life, Dr. T. G. Merritt, of North Mchopany, Pa., made a startling test, resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes: "A patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages, caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles so I prescribed them. The patient gained from the first, and has not had an attack in 14 months." Electric Bitters are positively guaranteed for Dyspepsia, indigestion, Constipation and Kidney troubles. Try them. Only 50c at R. C. Hardwick's.

Fine Corn Crop.

Mr. Jas. M. Medley, one of the leading farmers of the Beverly neighborhood, has presented the Kentuckian with some of the finest specimens of corn we have seen. There were ears of three different varieties, the white Willis, the famous "yard long" colored corn, and one other variety. The ears were more than a foot long and as fine a quality as one could wish. Mr. Medley has hundreds of barrels of the same sorts.

For the serious diseases that attack the kidney, Prickly Ash Bitters is an unfailing remedy. Relieves backache, swelling of feet and persistent headache, all symptoms which indicate kidney trouble. R. C. Hardwick.
